Discovery Call Evaluation

Product & Service Exploration

What Went Well: Asked detailed questions about coffee products and subscription model. Good follow-up on product differentiation.

Areas for Improvement: Could have probed deeper into unique selling points and competitive advantages in the specialty coffee market.

Score: 8/10

Target Audience Understanding

What Went Well: Identified key personas including "Home Brewer Hank" and showed understanding of remote professionals as target market.

Areas for Improvement: Missed opportunity to explore customer lifetime value and retention strategies for subscription model. Could have asked about customer acquisition costs.

Score: 11/15

Marketing Channels Assessment

What Went Well: Thoroughly discussed social media presence and content marketing strategy. Good questions about current channel performance.

Areas for Improvement: Did not explore email marketing automation capabilities or website conversion optimization. Could have asked about current analytics setup.

Score: 10/15

Campaign Goals Identification

What Went Well: Clearly identified lead generation and brand awareness as primary goals. Good prioritization of objectives.

Areas for Improvement: Could have established specific, measurable KPIs and timeline expectations. Missed opportunity to discuss ROI expectations.

Score: 12/15

Challenges & Pain Points Discovery

What Went Well: Excellent empathy when discussing time constraints and team bandwidth issues. Uncovered key pain point about inconsistent content creation.

Areas for Improvement: Could have dug deeper into previous failed marketing initiatives and what was learned from them.

Score: 13/15

Brand Assets Identification

What Went Well: Asked about existing brand guidelines and visual assets. Good questions about content library.

Areas for Improvement: Did not inquire about video content, photography resources, or user-generated content availability.

Score: 10/15

Data & Analytics Access

What Went Well: Mentioned analytics but did not request specific access or discuss current tracking capabilities in detail.

Areas for Improvement: Should have asked for access to Google Analytics, social media insights, and CRM data upfront to inform strategy.

Score: 8/15

Final Thoughts - 72/100

This was a solid discovery call with good rapport-building and active listening. The salesperson excelled at uncovering pain points around time constraints and showed strong empathy. To reach the next level, focus on being more methodical about gathering technical details (analytics access, specific KPIs) and asking second-level questions that dig deeper into the "why" behind challenges. Remember: great discovery calls balance relationship-building with collecting the concrete data needed for successful implementation.

Becca:

Hi there! I'm Becca from BrewSpot. Thanks so much for taking the time to meet with me today!

User:

Thanks for having me! I'm excited to learn more about how HubSpot can help us grow our coffee subscription business.

Becca:

That sounds great! Before we dive in, can you tell me a bit more about BrewSpot? What products and services do you offer?

User:

Sure! We're a premium coffee brand with multiple café locations in DC, a direct-to-consumer subscription service, and we also supply wholesale to boutique hotels and restaurants. We source from sustainable farms in Colombia, Ethiopia, Costa Rica, and Brazil.

Becca:

Wow, that's quite a diverse business model! I'm curious - who are your ideal customers for the subscription service? What does that target audience look like?

User:

Great question. We're primarily targeting remote professionals - people we call 'Home Brewer Hank' - who want barista-quality coffee at home without the coffee shop wait. They value quality and convenience, and they're willing to pay a premium for ethically sourced beans.

Becca:

That makes sense. And how are you currently reaching these customers? What marketing channels are you using right now?

User:

Right now we're mostly active on Instagram and TikTok, posting when we can. We also send out email blasts occasionally with promotions. Honestly, it's pretty inconsistent because my team and I are stretched thin. We don't have time to create all these assets consistently.

Becca:

I hear you on the time constraints - that's really common. What are your main goals for your marketing campaigns? What would success look like?

User:

We really want to grow our subscription base and build brand awareness. Right now we're putting out social posts when we have time, sending marketing blasts offering discounts, but we can't see if any of it is actually working. We need a more structured approach.

Becca:

It sounds like measuring results is a challenge. What other pain points are you experiencing with your current marketing efforts?

User:

The biggest issue is we simply don't have the bandwidth to run thoughtful campaigns. Everything feels reactive rather than strategic. We know we need better content, more consistency, and a way to track what's actually driving subscriptions, but we just don't have the resources or systems in place.

Becca:

That makes total sense, and you're not alone in feeling that way. Do you have any existing brand assets we could work with - like brand guidelines, photos, videos, or past campaign materials?

User:

We have a brand book with our logo and color palette, and we've accumulated quite a bit of product photography. We also have some short video clips from our cafés, but nothing really organized or optimized for digital marketing.

Becca:

Good to know we have some assets to start with. One last question - do you currently have access to any analytics or data about your audience? Like website analytics, social media insights, or CRM data?

User:

We have Google Analytics set up on our website, but honestly I don't look at it much because I don't know what I'm looking for. Same with our social media - I know Instagram and TikTok have insights, but I've never really dug into them.

Becca:

That's really helpful to know. HubSpot can definitely help you make sense of all that data and turn it into actionable insights. Would it be okay if we got access to your analytics accounts so we can understand your baseline and build a strategy from there?

User:

Absolutely, that would be great. I'm excited to see how HubSpot can help us get more organized and actually measure our impact.
